Washington, D.C. – U.S. Congressman Charlie Wilson (OH-6) announced today that up to 119 taxpayers in Ohio's Sixth District have money coming to them from the Internal Revenue Service. Earlier this holiday season the IRS announced that nearly $110 million in tax refund checks remain undelivered. At least 115,478 taxpayers nation-wide are due refunds, yet haven't claimed them.

Perhaps a resident moved or made a mistake with their return address. There are a variety of reasons that tax refunds get marked "undeliverable" and returned to the IRS. The average refund is $953 and the funds can be delivered as soon as taxpayers update their addresses with the IRS.

"I'm pleased to let people in my district know that some of them are due a refund," Wilson said. "You don't often want to see your name on a list put out by the IRS – but this is a good list! You could be owed money and you deserve to get it right away."
